

I International Conference Cities and Universities

Building a partnership for social, cultural and economic sustainable development

December 12 and 13, 2023

Poblenou Campus, Barcelona (Spain)
Universitat Pompeu Fabra

Presentation of the Conference

Cities and universities have often lived unaware of each other. Usually, their priorities, objectives, and dynamics have not merged. The few collaborations were based on a utilitarian and short-term perspective.

The advent of the knowledge society implies the need for much closer and more stable cooperation between the local and regional spheres and the academic sphere of research and innovation. At the same time, the broad social, economic, cultural, and technological transformations of the beginning of the 21st century require multistakeholder governance involving public institutions, businesses, civic society, and universities or knowledge hubs. The local and regional sphere is the critical space to implement specific policies and programmes to address the global challenges (those that appear in the 2030 Agenda as the Sustainable Development Goals). Social complexity means that science, innovation, and talent should be at the service of public policy and working hand in hand with local and regional institutions.

Thus, there are several areas of collaboration and interaction between cities and universities in topics as diverse as talent, ongoing training and learning; citizen science and responsible research; equity and social progress; innovation, entrepreneurship and business support; fostering a critical and engaged citizenship; cultural vitality; urban planning and community development; international partnerships and global challenges; and sustainable development.

That is the backdrop to the new Cities and Universities Programme of the Global University Network for Innovation (GUNi). GUNi brings together 300 higher education institutions in 90 countries. It aims to create and advance a global strategic partnership between universities and cities embedded in the knowledge society. A partnership that will promote socioeconomic progress, by encouraging knowledge and tackling common issues to break new ground. A partnership that will advertise Barcelona and Catalonia to the world in the field of sustainable cooperation between cities and universities.

The I International Conference Cities and Universities aims to be the starting line of a rigorous debate to set the building blocks of the Cities and Universities Programme of GUNi.

Organisers and promoting institutions

The conference is organised by the Global University Network for Innovation (GUNi) and the Catalan Association of Public Universities (ACUP). It receives direct support from the Catalan Government, the Barcelona City Council, the Barcelona Provincial Council, and the La Caixa Foundation in the framework of the world capital for higher education initiative.
